Preview: is Quicksilver 810 Arvor just for fishermen?

BY THE BOATMAG EDITOR • APRILE 3, 2015

Designed for the passionate angler, the new Quicksilver 810 Arvor will be the right choice also for the boater who want to enjoy the sea in safety, comfort and reliability.

The Arvor range by Quicksilver is growing, with the 810 to join the existing 730 and 690. Three extra feet further enhance the peculiarities of the previous 760: a sturdy and proven hull, a large cabin with increased comfort, an evolved deck layout. The result matches the needs of the demanding fisherman with those of the guest who jump aboard to enjoy a relaxing cruise.

The "B" class certification means that Quicksilver 810 Arvor can be at ease both close to shore and in deep sea, which is a important for the angler. The large cockpit is designer around the gaming activity, with flip-down seats and wells for baits and catch. There's a dedicated area for preparation of the baits, and enough spotlights to allow for night fishing trips. The Mercury Diesel engine with trolling valve is perfect for this kind of gaming, which can be run for hours without stressing engine or transmission. Disengage the valve, and you get to your preferred spot at a pretty fast pace.

From the cabin the visibility is all around thanks to the clear access door that allows back view. The SmartCraft hydraulic rudder controls are easy to operate while the dashboard has enough space for all the electronics and controls one may need. In option, a second piloting station can be mounted outdoors.

The inner dinette can turn into a double berth, while a small galley and separate lavatory complete the layout. Light is granted by side, sliding windows and a top hatch during the day, while in the night it's provided by LED spots.
